Side Notes: I started writing this tune on a morning where there was just a light rain. The temperature was perfect and there is something amazing about the smell that rain makes when it covers the sidewalks and everything around you. I tried to capture the soundtrack of what it feels like with the fresh rain on a cool relaxing day.

When you play any piece of music, if you will visualize a moment in your life, a special place, or even a happy memory, your playing will have more emotion and feeling in it. If you can take your mind to that place and even start to recognize the smell, how you feel in that place and picture the people that might be around you at that time, you will take your playing to another level and I am almost sure others will hear that emotion as well.

Summer Rain
